JOIN THE CONVERSATION CMC FORUM 6 WORD MEMOIRS

Legend has it that the six-word memoir traces back to Ernest Hemingway when he was asked to write an entire story using only six words. He responded, "For Sale: baby shoes, never worn." Since Hemingway, countless others have taken up the challenge to tell miniature stories of their own; some deep, some sweet, some funny. A few years back, the graduating Class of 2012 decided to make it a part of their graduating tradition to follow suit and write their own six-word memoirs.

Now, each May, seniors describe their four years at CMC in six words. The staff of The Forum, would like to extend the same challenge to you.

Visit the Six-Word Memoir Bar in the Alumni Club to draft your unique story about your time at CMC and/or your experience at Alumni Weekend.
